Message from Singlife Group Chief Executive Officer Pearlyn Phau

Dear Valued Policyholders,

I am pleased to share Singlife's semi-annual Investment-Linked Policy (ILP) funds report for the period ending 31 December 2025. The report covers the latest updates on the performance and strategies of the ILP funds, to help inform your investment decisions ahead.

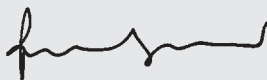

Global markets showed resilience in the second half of 2025. Governments and businesses adapted quickly to US trade tariff policies and prevented severe disruptions to the global economy. The surge in AI-related investments provided fresh growth momentum and contributed to a brighter outlook for major economies. As a result, both equity and fixed income markets made a swift recovery from initial tariff shocks to deliver strong performance across the board.

As compared to the first half of the year, the US dollar also saw greater stability, though worries over geopolitical uncertainties and debt sustainability drove gold prices to new highs. In Singapore, the equities and bond markets enjoyed strong rallies, helped by safe-haven inflows and better-than-expected economic growth.

The second half of 2025 reminded us of how unpredictable financial markets can be. More importantly, it underscored the value of a disciplined investing approach – one that focuses on long-term growth while mitigating risks – through diversification and prudent asset allocation. This is the investment philosophy we follow at Singlife.

As part of our commitment to support you on your financial journey, we encourage you to review your portfolio regularly with your financial adviser representatives. This will help ensure that your portfolio remains resilient amidst evolving market conditions.

Thank you for choosing Singlife – a better way to financial freedom.

Message from Singlife Chief Investment Officer

Allen Kuo

Dear Valued Policyholders,

2025 was a very volatile year, marked by the first full year of US President Donald Trump's second term in office. Markets reacted negatively to Trump's "Liberation Day" tariff policies in April, but his abrupt reversal led to most major asset classes ending up positive by year end.

Equity markets were ultimately buoyed by an AI investment frenzy in the US. The S&P 500 Index recovered from its lows in April to approach near 7000 by the end of the year. Strong performance was also seen in emerging market equities, with the MSCI Emerging Markets Index surging by 40% from its April low. Central bank rate cuts provided another boost to equities. Bond prices rose on looser monetary policies and tightening credit spreads in line with a more positive economic outlook.

As an open economy, Singapore benefitted from growth momentum in global trade and finance. The Straits Times Index grew by more than 17% in the second half, against a favourable global economic backdrop and on the back of Singapore government equity market reforms. A key theme of 2025 was the recognition of Singapore government bonds as a global "safe-haven" asset by foreign investors, which helped further drive down Singapore interest rates.

Looking ahead to 2026, the global economy is expected to keep growing, but at a slightly lower rate than 2025. Headline inflation is expected to ease slightly, and likely stay above the 2% target set by many central banks.

Accordingly, the broad trend projected for monetary policy is that it will stay neutral or ease gradually, to support domestic growth and labour markets amidst global economic uncertainty. Altogether, these conditions support nominal returns of risk assets.

However, investors should be mindful of the vulnerabilities of current markets. The US equity market rally has been lacking in breadth, driven by AI tech companies which have embarked on massive capital spending. Should earnings not materialise to justify that spending, prices will adjust accordingly. Within the fixed income space, credit spreads for both US investment-grade and high-yield bonds are very tight by historical standards, increasing downside risk.

A key structural shift with significant financial implications is the recalibration of the US' role within the international system. At a broad level, this heightens geopolitical uncertainty, and for the US, it raises concerns over the future of the dollar, and the sustainability of government deficit spending. More scrutiny may also be drawn to the debt situation of G7 economies, where the group's debt-to-GDP ratio is approaching a record high, in a situation called "fiscal dominance". The incredible performance of gold in 2025 is consistent with these broad, structural trends and the so-called "debasement trade", but investors should watch for signs of short-term speculative activity in precious metals markets.

Given our outlook, a sensible investment approach would be to maintain diversification across geographies, sectors and asset classes, to avoid risk concentration. It also entails a clear focus on fundamentals, where investment decisions are based on the determination of fair value. As markets will likely see greater volatility and become noisier, taking a long-term perspective will help provide clarity and avoid emotional trading, positioning investors for steady gains over time.

Through Singlife's fund offerings, we aim to help you manage your investment portfolio prudently and further support you in your financial journey. Our financial adviser representatives are also available for regular portfolio evaluations to ensure you remain on track with your financial goals.

Thank you for choosing Singlife as your trusted partner.
